to divulge the names of the parties to whom he paid this sum—Count de Morny being tolerably well known to be one—is un'errored to have much to do with his acquitian.

The chest containing the papers ordered to be returned to Mirea weighs more than 600 pounds. The copying of decuments endy cost 7,000 frames. The copying of decuments endy cost 7,000 frames, this retital some 200 000 frames. Considering that justlee is said to be granted gratuitously in France, this is pretty well.

M. de l'inhibitcher has published a panaphiet on the kingdom of italy, which looks very like a Freich governmental programme. He divides the late Italian States into two classes or groups—one comprising the kingdom of Anaples, minos Sicily; the other the remainder of the peninsula. He inquires whether unification is to be considered as an accomplished fact. He considers that Toncainy, Modera, and Parma are all well satisfied with this unification, as also Umbria and the Marches, and that throughout the whole of Upper italy the beneficial effect of this great measure is experienced in the shape of an increased traffic. Society rejoiced at this unification from its autipathy to Nespolitan rule. But Naples is historically and geographically separated from the rest of Haly, and the author thinks four or five years of peace and tranquillity are necessary to reconcile it to the change, that, in fact, the adjourning of the Roman question revents an Austro-Spanish intervention—keeps the demagouse of Italy in check, and reduces the Papucy to its original condition; and, lastly, that the kingdom of Italy is an accomplished fact that must be reorgained by the other Powers of Europe. He thinks, likewise, that the French troops must remain at Rome.

Indeed, several private letters have been received by Southerners here from friends in Baltimore and Philadelphia, making the latter statement, on the strength of which they have fallen back on their old game of brag. One or two grand victories, they say, would convince the nations of Europe that they possess sufficient strength to enable them to resist successfully; and their hopes are again reviving that France and England will recognize them. Most of the news, such as I have given a specimen of above, comes here to Mr. Slidell, and is by him sent to the

These people in one important respect gain a continual advan-tage over the loyal Americans resident in Paris. They are eternally talking, in season and out of season, and endeavoring to convince everybody with whom they come in contact of the justice and sure success of their cause. Englishmen in particular, who encounter them at the hotels, are immediately set upon, and all the old grievances which they allege against the North are set forth in pitiable terms; and then the brag game is resorted to, and the superiority of race asserted, and the determina-

Death of the Rev. Mr. Coppix at the Hands of Brigands-Efforts for Their Arrest, fig.

The A.B. M. F. Missions has just experienced a severeless in the death of one of its most efficient members in this country.

The Rev. J. Coppix, a missionary established at Adama in Asia Minor, whilst proceeding from this place to Alexandrotta, on the sea coast, was fired upon by a party of brigands, and in a few hours died of two wounds received in his breast. He was accompanied by an Armenias Protestant servant, two muleteers, a Turkish cavese of guard, and an Ottoman official. Mr. Coppix and his ser vant were both killed, and one of the muleteers and the official were severely wounded, official were severely wounded,

The British and American Vice Consuls of Alexandretta, on hearing of the sad affair, proceeded immediately to the spot, accompanied by a large number of guards, and had Mr. C. conveyed to the town; but it is believed that he expired before reaching it. His wife was there to see the dead body of hor husband.

The Governor of Alexandretts has taken every possible means to find out and punish the perpetrators of this horrible act, and the Porte has sent strong orders to both him and the Governor of Adam to the same effect.

Mr. Johnson, the excellent and abic Consul of the
